KNOW YOUR CAGE-FREE FACTS

1

87% of South Africa's layer hens are confined to cages the size of an A4 sheet of paper.

2

Industry has made no movement in two decades to move layer hens out of cages. Only 1% of the national flock is cage-free and 4 % is free-range.

3

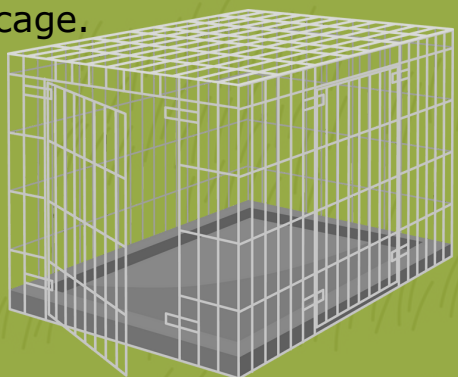

Approximately 86% of the eggs used in South African hotels, restaurants and retailers come from hens that are confined to cages.

4

Removing hens from cages will ensure higher-quality eggs and protect consumers from health risks such as salmonella and zoonotic diseases like Avian Flu for hens.

5

Eliminating cages allows the hens that lay our eggs to move more freely; perch, spread their wings, dust bathe, access nest boxes, interact with their flock; as nature intended and enjoy a healthier life free from a cramped cage.
